

Many senior leaders are busy, and being confronted with challenging problems that they feel too time-poor to address.

Is your problem...

- Recurring – you've tried addressing it before but nothing seems to work
- Messy – you know that emotions are going to be strong
- One that requires people to change their mind set and find a new way of doing things

These types of challenges require everyone impacted by the problem - and the solution - to be involved. You know that there are many perspectives on the issues and somehow, a path needs to be found through those different views to a solution where everyone has changed their own minds a bit.

These are the types of challenges that I love!

And when we get into it, your people will love it too. They will feel valued because they are involved in something meaningful, and they will be learning and growing at the same time. It's very likely that they will also develop stronger bonds as they work.

your problem
+ your people
+ my expertise
= the solution

Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the experience of being able to control the “emergent agenda” and have the conversations they most care about.

Dr Josie McLean

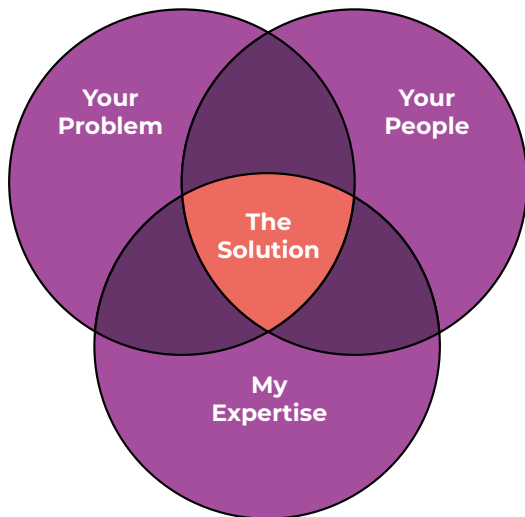

Let me help you and kick start the way forward on your problem.

Like many senior managers, you have a lot on your plate without having to design a tricky workshop. And sometimes it's just better to have an 'outsider' to help hold the space so that you can participate too. And, this is my area of expertise!

This program includes:

- Preparation and design with you
- One-day delivery with your team and/or stakeholders

Leap in – let's get it done. Click here to set up a 20-minute conversation to discuss how to move forward.

I've already received some fantastically positive comments from my staff about yesterday's session and their excitement about how we will move forward.

Testimonials

"Josie and her team are professional, friendly and easy to work with. They certainly know their stuff, and as a research community, we were impressed by their methodological approach. The communication leading up to our strategy day was clear and we were able to tailor-make a solution to meet our needs. We have received only positive affirmation from our staff, collaborators and members of the community who were present on the day. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the experience of being able to control the "emergent agenda" and have the conversations they most care about. We now have myriad of new ideas and concepts to explore as we embark on our shared research vision together. I highly recommend Josie and her team and look forward to working with them again."

- Natasha Stevens, Program Manager, MS Research Flagship, Menzies Institute for Medical Research, University of Tasmania

"I've already received some fantastically positive comments from my staff about yesterday's session and their excitement about how we will move forward. Thanks so much for your engagement and energy throughout the session, and for the session design itself. It really resonated with me and my staff."

- Lorraine Karunaratne General Manager, UniSA Business at University of South Australia

